692 Panchâyat lay to the Párapatingár or to the Devân's Kacheri. The Párapatingár settled at his own responsibility or through a Panchâyat cases of small amount which, however, remained undefined.

685 When theft was committed in a village, the Gauda with the ryots exerted themselves to catch the thief and on apprehension carried him to the Párapatingár's Kacheri, where an enquiry was made, the stolen property, if possible, recovered and restored to the owner with an award of half the value of the stolen property as a punishment of the thief. In default 681 of payment, he was flogged or sentenced to work on the roads. 565 Corporal punishment was not restricted to any class of crime or people; even Devâns, who had incurred the displeasure of the Rájahs, were subjected to the last, some times swung by the royal hand!

682 In murder cases, the Párapatingárs and the Subadár of the district committed the criminal for trial to the Huzur, the 692 officials of which, under orders from the Rájah, examined the prisoner and reported the result. According to circumstances the murderer would be pardoned, fined, whipped, mutilated 684 or executed, agreeably to the Rájah's orders. In cases of adultery the guilty parties were severely and barbarously punished. Manslaughter committed in a state of intoxication 682 or during hunting or whilst guarding the crops against wild beasts, was leniently dealt with, especially if the unfortunate man reported the accident voluntarily before the Huzur had been informed of it. Eloping from the country and treasonable 684 687 acts against the Sirkar were considered as the most heinous crimes, and the culprit, if caught, seldom escaped capital punishment, dictated with a savage vindictiveness. Of the 696 nature of these punishments it is difficult to credit the stories, that are told of their frequency and ferocity. The ordinary ones are said to have been: crushing to death by elephants, strangulation or decapitation by the large Coorg knife, a most

Whenever information is lodged of a person having died a violent death, the functionaries shall proceed to the 671 spot where the dead body may have been found. They shall 177 examine the body and ascertain, whether there are any marks [625] of violence upon it, or bruises, the number of them, and with [682] what weapons the wounds or hurts may appear to have been given. The above inquiries shall be made in the presence of two or three creditable persons, and being committed to writing the proceedings shall be sent to the Daryáft-Kacheri, afterwards the functionaries shall endeavour to trace the persons who may have murdered the deceased and apprehend them.

49. The Subadárs of the taluqs on the frontier shall be [635] particularly vigilant in apprehending robbers and vagabonds who may come to this district from the neighbouring countries to commit mischief.

50. The magisterial authority of the Subadárs does not [635] extend to the pettas, where Kotwals are employed. The police [692] of the pettas is entrusted to the charge of the Kotwals and they will preserve the peace there. In cases where Kotwals [625] may require the assistance of the Subadárs or the Revenue officers who may be near the pettas, they shall be promptly furnished with the aid demanded.

51. In cases where any person of whatever caste may die a natural death without having relations or friends present, the Sirkar servants shall cause the corpse to be buried or burned according to circumstances at an expense of from one to three canterai fanams. But if the deceased leaves property [768] and no relations to claim it, a sufficient portion of the property shall be appropriated for the performance of the funeral ceremonies, and the remainder lodged in the Public Treasury until claimed.

52. Any person who has laboured under the disease of [766] leprosy shall not be buried in the earth. The corpse of such person shall be burned, or if the caste of the deceased do not
